

Going Github

This is something I've been looking forward to do for some time. After praising git back in 2007, now I'm moving many of my personal projects to Github, which has an absolutely brilliant service! For the moment I'm using the free account, but I will most probably switch to a paid account soon. The only thing it lacks, in my opinion, is a bug & issue tracker as you have in Google Code repositories, but other than that, it's simply perfect.

So feel free to check out the projects I've moved there, and of course, to fork them and enjoy the code as you see fit.
